From the dustjacket: "The canoe has a firm place in the mythology of our continent. Its history stretches back into the unrecorded past, its construction has conferred status on the builder and has fascinated the bystander for centuries, its forms are many and varied -- as are its uses, which range from the practical to the ceremonial and totemic. Above all, there is an undefinable romance about the canoe, a sense of its place in the lives of countless generations and its role in the history of our land." Chapters on Rafts and Floats, The Dugout, The Skin Boat, The Bark Canoe, and the Modern Canoe. Filled with color and black and white illustrations and photographs.
